Part III - Analysis and Statement of the Reasons for Detention
After considering the factors set forth in 18 U.S.C. § 3142(g) and the information presented at the detention hearing the Court concludes that the defendant must be detained pending trial because the Government has proven:

■ By a preponderance of evidence that no condition or combination of conditions of release will reasonably assure the defendant's appearance as required.
In addition to any findings made on the record at the hearing, the reasons for detention include the following:
☑ Weight of evidence against the defendant is strong

OTHER REASONS OR FURTHER EXPLANATION:

For purposes to this order, I accept and apply the legal analysis adopted by Judge Gwin in United States v. Velez-Alonso, No. 1:18cr464 (Oct. 12, 2018)(ECF #21). This decision is made under the Bail Reform Act only, and the factors set forth in 18 U.S.C. 3142(g). There is no statutory presumption in favor of detention. The defendant, a citizen of Mexico, illegally entered the United States in 2013 and was administratively removed in 2014. Shortly thereafter he re-entered the United States and has evaded the authorities until the investigation that led to his arrest this year. At some point he resided in Oswego, New York, where he married a United States citizen. Within the past year he and his wife, and her daughter by another association, moved to Ohio, where the defendant runs a drywall business using undocumented aliens who he housed and furnished support. He has a son who he has fathered by another woman, both in Mexico, where his parents also reside. The defendant has no significant community or family ties to this district. He does have significant family ties in Mexico. While in the district he ran a business using undocumented aliens who are now in the custody of ICE. He has shown his ability to live and make a living in this country for a substantial period of time without being detected by law enforcement.

Part IV - Directions Regarding Detention

The defendant is remanded to the custody of the Attorney General or to the Attorney General's designated representative for confinement in a corrections facility separate, to the extent practicable, from persons awaiting or serving sentences or being held in custody pending appeal. The defendant must be afforded a reasonable opportunity for private consultation with defense counsel. On order of a court of the United States or on request of an attorney for the Government, the person in charge of the corrections facility must deliver the defendant to a United States Marshal for the purpose of an appearance in connection with a court proceeding.
